

The WRP: A Key Tool for Fostering an Inclusive Federal Workforce

The Workforce Recruitment Program (WRP) is a free talent database that helps federal agencies connect with qualified candidates with disabilities for all jobs. Users can find candidates with the specific skills they need to fill federal positions paid for by their agencies.

Who participates in the WRP?

Candidates in the WRP database are students and recent graduates with disabilities who are available for internships or temporary or permanent employment in the Federal Government. Candidates represent a wide range of academic and professional backgrounds. All candidates are eligible for federal hiring under the Schedule A hiring authority.

The 2024 WRP database includes approximately 3,300 students and recent graduates from 500 accredited institutions. Collectively, these individuals represent:

440
Veterans

935
IT-Based Majors

290
Engineers

135
Accountants

330
Health Care Professionals

370
HR/Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) Professionals

915
Graduate Students

90
Law School Students

115
MBAs

110
Doctoral Candidates

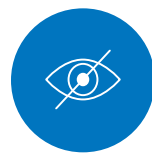

What benefits does the WRP offer me?

Streamline your searches for candidates by filtering results.

Access and save relevant candidate information easily.

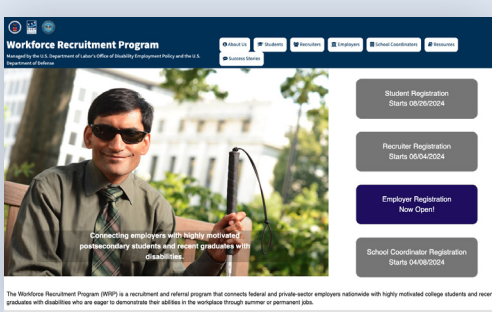

Use the Schedule A hiring authority to hire directly without having to publicly post the position.

Advance goals for diversity, equity, inclusion and accessibility in the federal workforce.
