Indiana Dunes National Park, home to shifting sand dunes and significant plant and bird diversity along the coast of Lake Michigan, offers recreation such as beachgoing, swimming, fishing, horseback riding, hiking, and cross-country skiing. Many of the historic facilities at the park have been closed to the public for several years due to structural instability and unsafe conditions. This project completes historic rehabilitation on the popular and significant historical structures at the Bailey Homestead, Good Fellow Camp, and the House of Tomorrow. These repairs will enable educational programming and reopen structures to the public. The project will also improve water and wastewater systems, move power lines underground, and incorporate modernized technology to increase energy efficiency.

GAOA LRF is funding Maintenance Action Teams (MATs) in the National Park Service and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. MATs primarily consist of federal employees who mobilize regionally to work on smaller scope construction, demolition, rehabilitation, or preservation activities. As of September 2023, MATs have completed work at Lincoln Boyhood National Memorial in Indiana.

At Lincoln Boyhood National Memorial, MATs repointed flagstone and restored sculpted panels in the plaza.
