Description: The federal oil and gas leasing process plays a critical role in deciding whether, where and when oil and gas resources on public lands are developed, the revenue the government takes in, and the extent to which the local environment is protected. Yet, with the threat of climate change growing increasingly urgent, it is becoming apparent that the terms of U.S. lease agreements are not delivering a fair return for taxpayers and put the environment and public health at risk. Recognizing the need for reforms, President Joe Biden temporarily suspended oil and gas lease sales in January while his administration could review the program—a review that is still ongoing. The Biden administration has also signaled its commitment to clean up abandoned and orphaned oil and gas wells on federal lands, potentially putting displaced oil and gas workers to work cleaning up the wells. And all of this comes against the backdrop of intensified focus on addressing climate change not just within the administration but also in Congress and the broader public debate.

Join EPIC as we host Interior Deputy Secretary Tommy Beaudreau for a conversation on the future of oil and gas drilling on federal lands as the Biden administration focuses on a transition to a clean energy economy. EPIC Scholar and Harris Public Policy Professor Ryan Kellogg will join the conversation. The conversation will be led by The Washington Post's Juliet Eilperin, and the event will be moderated by EPIC's Lindsay Iversen.

This event is part of a series discussing timely energy and climate policy challenges with government and industry leaders, and other experts. The topics stem from the U.S. Energy & Climate Roadmap, which presents evidence-based recommendations from University of Chicago scholars to inform climate policy in the new administration and Congress.

Holding this time each week to coordinate on land & water conservation, climate, and jobs actions outlined in the early EOs. We likely won't need the full hour each week but blocking the time in case. Hoping to keep the group relatively small: 1-3 key people per agency/office.

Thanks,
Matt

The invitation for this roundtable already was gone out to stakeholders. This meeting appointment is being sent out to federal family participants. Below is the text from the invitation to stakeholders.

"Greetings,

You are invited to contribute to a White House Council on Environmental Quality roundtable on engaging the philanthropy sector in the President's America the Beautiful initiative. This particular roundtable will focus on landscape connectivity and will take place on November 30 at 3-4 PM ET. While we welcome input on all aspects of the America the Beautiful initiative, we specifically are seeking input during the roundtable on these questions:

1. What are your insights on the complementary roles of government and philanthropy in the big challenges that America the Beautiful initiative seeks to confront?
2. How do your foundation's priorities relate to the America the Beautiful initiative?
3. What are the gaps in support and funding where private foundations can help to catalyze action in concert with federal programs and initiatives?"
